Notable features:

These are shops with dwellings above, with the exception of 907-909, which is an old Kresge's changed to Western Auto and is a 20th century building, all date from what might be called the "second generation" of Baltimore Street. This street developed early as a commercial center; it was lined with 2½ story and 2 story buildings. As the neighborhood prospered, the commercial activity grew, the old buildings were replaced or remodelled. This group is typical commercial, late 19th century.

These buildings could be rehabilitated and made quite pleasant in appearance. When old shop fronts remain, they should be rehabilitated to restore the character of the area.

Environmental context:

Number 915 is vacant; there is more commercial activity remaining here than on the opposite side where storage and even light industrial uses prevail. (See comment for 901 W. Baltimore Street.)
